SHEET 4 OF 6 · QUARTERLY RHYTHM

Four dates that come around every year

Some paperwork rhythms land on the same four spots every year. The exact calendar dates live on official government pages; this sheet is where they live for you — once you look them up for your year, they have a home. Fill the your date blanks, then let the checkboxes carry the memory.

PAYMENT COVERS MONEY EARNED IN	USUALLY LANDS AROUND	YOUR 20___ DATE	DONE	CONFIRMATION
First quarter — January, February, March	mid-April	___ / ___ / ___	☐	how you paid, receipt #:
Second quarter — April, May	mid-June	___ / ___ / ___	☐	how you paid, receipt #:
Third quarter — June, July, August	mid-September	___ / ___ / ___	☐	how you paid, receipt #:
Fourth quarter — September through December	mid-January, next year	___ / ___ / ___	☐	how you paid, receipt #:

The official deadlines can slide a day or two when they land on a weekend or holiday, and they differ by state and situation. The government's own current-year calendar is the source of truth — these boxes are where your looked-up dates get kept, not where they get invented.

Repeat gently: how the four dials in a filing season

- When the first date rolls around, your folders already hold the ground you gained from filing season — set your reminder dates in one sitting for the whole year.
- Each done box earns its receipt. Clip the payment confirmation to this page — that's what the confirmation column is for.
- After the January date, Sheet 5's give-away rules decide what leaves the year's folders — the loop closes, and a new one starts.

WARM TIP

Set a phone reminder about a week before each your date, titled "quarterly paperwork — check the folder." Future-you is always a different, busier person; present-you doing ninety seconds of calendar typing is the kindest meeting of the two. And if a quarter gets missed, the folder and this page tell you plainly what was and wasn't sent — which is exactly the information that makes the fix easy.

This is a paper organizer, never tax, legal, or financial advice. Confirm official dates for your own year and situation.
